Dear Dr. Lozansky:

Thank you for your invitation to participate in the 1988 Free University International Summer School on "East-West Relations in the Era of Glasnost" this June. Unfortunately, I have made prior commitments, and must decline. I believe that much can be learned through the type of program you have planned and I wish you the best.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Judge Webster:

I am writing to you to introduce to you a new project of Free University (formerly the Andrei Sakharov Institute), which I hope you will find worth your interest and participation.

In 1988, Free University plans to conduct an International Summer School on East-West Relations in the Era of "Glasnost" for American graduate students and congressional and governmental staff. We believe that it is of utmost importance to expose this group to differing views and opinions of leading experts in order to enable them to construct a complete and balanced picture of East-West Affairs.

Therefore, we would like to ask you to join our list of eminent experts on Soviet Affairs, and to speak to our students. I am enclosing a tentative program schedule, so that you may choose a topic or possibly expand and add to our focus with a subject of your own choosing. Also enclosed please find a list of speakers that have agreed to address our group.

I hope that you will be interested in participating in this project. The exact date of your talk and its topic can be discussed later.

Wishing you and your loved ones a successful 1988, I remain,

Sincerely,

Edward Lozansky
